Following publication of this article (Park, 2021), the author would like to add new content in the Acknowledgements section.

The updated Acknowledgements is given below and the changes have been highlighted in bold typeface.

The author would like to thank all who took part in this project. The author acknowledges that the Korean Digital Kitchen (KDK) is one of the by-products of the European Digital Kitchen or LanCook project, funded by an EU grant. The technology is the intellectual property of Newcastle University and was developed there by computing scientists and applied linguists, whose names are acknowledged in Seedhouse (2017, p. xiii). What the Korean Digital Kitchen study contributed was to use the authoring tool software to create new materials for international students to learn Korean language and culture. All data of the KDK belongs to the author of this paper.

The original article (Park, 2021) has been corrected.
